Adapty – Event Marketing Manager

Dear Adapty team,

I have been the first or early marketing hire at several B2B companies, and in each one I had to show what a program returned before I could ask for more budget. I would judge an event the same way: what did it cost, who was in the room, and what closed afterwards.

At Bujeti (YC W23), events and partnerships produced more than 200 of the 1,331 marketing qualified leads we generated in six months. At FunnelEnvy my account-based marketing lifted enterprise meeting booking rates by 31%, and I built the reporting across HubSpot, Looker Studio and Lightdash myself. I also co-host Marketing & Chill in Lagos, a meetup that brings 60 to 80 marketers, founders and creators together twice a year, so I know how much of a good room is decided by who gets invited.

I went through what Adapty and FunnelFox have run publicly since last September, including the App Leaders Meetup in Berlin, the 10-founder App Leaders Club sessions and the NASDAQ conference. The formats are already varied. The missing piece is one rule that says which ones earn another round. I wrote that rule up, with a go or no-go test and a plan for a London flagship: https://jamespraise.xyz/work/adapty-events/proof/

The first thing I would ask for is the cost and closed-won data for the last 12 months, because that decides which of these formats keep their budget.

What do you think?

James

P.S. I've created a portfolio focused on this role at jamespraise.xyz/work/adapty-events.