Camunda – Senior Product Marketing Manager, EMEA

Dear Camunda Product Marketing team,

Camunda's SAP integration is certified, and Panasonic Europe runs it across more than 220,000 workflow instances a year. I wrote the sales motion for it in Europe, the Middle East and Africa (EMEA): a co-sell brief for SAP-shop accounts that covers which accounts to target, where Camunda sits next to SAP's own process tools, and a 90-day plan for the EMEA field. It's at jamespraise.xyz/work/camunda-emea/proof. In September I also wrote a battlecard against Appian with an answer to the Gartner Leader versus Visionary objection, at jamespraise.xyz/work/camunda/proof.

I've spent my career doing this kind of work, usually as the person building the function where nothing existed. At Reform I repositioned a general-purpose form builder as conversion infrastructure, then reframed it for developers as programmable go-to-market infrastructure. Trial activation rose 34%. I also ran the sunset of Reform's legacy free plan with communications at 90, 30, 7 and 1 day, and 72% of those users moved to paid. At FunnelEnvy I built an account-based playbook with Clay, ExactBuyer and Instantly that lifted enterprise meeting bookings 31%.

The enterprise side comes from Cecure Intelligence, where I ran a sales-led motion across Sub-Saharan Africa with long cycles and several stakeholders per deal: 1,646 marketing qualified leads and $3.4M in open pipeline. I work on Claude Code and n8n every day, and I built the tooling behind my own go-to-market myself, so a technical buyer's questions do not lose me.

I have not marketed process orchestration or worked with Business Process Model and Notation. I would spend my first weeks with your solution architects and in sales calls before writing anything for the field. I live in Lagos, so EMEA hours work for me, and I would like to hear what EMEA means for this role in practice.

P.S. I've created a portfolio focused on this role at jamespraise.xyz/work/camunda-emea.
