Camunda – Director, Solution and Product Marketing

Dear Hiring Manager,

Turning a technical platform story into something a non-technical buyer can act on describes work I've already done, and it's the actual gap behind "agentic orchestration" landing with Camunda's CFOs and boards the way it already lands with architects and engineers.

At Reform, I repositioned a developer-first form builder into a category-specific conversion tool for a defined buyer, the same kind of narrative translation this role needs for agentic orchestration. Trial activation rose 34%. At FunnelEnvy, I ran competitive intelligence as a continuous flywheel rather than a one-time project: battlecards and win-loss analysis briefed to sales on a defined cadence, the same discipline Camunda needs against Appian, Pega, ServiceNow, and Temporal at $100M+ ARR.

A recurring pattern in my career is being trusted to take ambiguous problems and turn them into structured systems. At Cecure Intelligence, that meant moving from an individual contributor sales role into Head of Growth and Marketing within twelve months, building the account-based pipeline system along the way.

I don't have ten years in enterprise software marketing. I have seven. Those seven years already required the same player and coach balance this role names: at Marketing In Action, I direct specialists on client engagements while remaining the person who writes the positioning myself.

I put together a short breakdown of where I'd start at Camunda specifically. Happy to walk through it before we talk.

James

P.S. I've created a portfolio focused on this role at jamespraise.xyz/work/camunda.