Shape – Demand Generation Manager

Dear Dave,

I want to join Shape because the role is built around one number, and I've spent most of my career being the first person whose job is that number. Before I wrote this letter, I worked your 30 qualified demos back from your published prices. The biggest lever I found sits between a demo request and a meeting on the calendar. With instant booking after the form, 30 held demos need about 66 requests a month. Without it, they need about 146, and the media bill more than doubles. The full model, a calculator and a review of your demo path are at jamespraise.xyz/work/shape/proof.

What I bring is a playbook I've run more than once. It starts from the meetings needed, sets stage volumes and a cost per stage from there, and fixes the handoff before adding budget. At Cecure Intelligence Limited, a B2B technology and training provider, I owned the funnel from campaign to closed deal across five markets. That produced 1,646 marketing qualified leads and 629 demos booked, with paid campaigns returning 2-3x on budgets of $1,500 to $15,000 a month. At Bujeti, a Y Combinator company that had relied on outbound, I built the growth function from zero. It produced 1,331 marketing qualified leads in 6 months and a 500% increase in new business customers, and events and partnerships added 200+ more as a second engine. At FunnelEnvy, an account-based playbook I built with Clay lifted enterprise meeting booking rates 31%.

I don't have construction experience. What I do have is years of selling to buyers who need to see the money before they take a meeting, which is why I'd put your $300,000 recovery story much closer to the top of the page.

One more thing you should know up front. I'm based in Lagos, and the posting hires in the Philippines or Portugal. Laminar already hires through Oyster, so I'd join through an Employer of Record or as a contractor and work your 4-day week.

I'd like to talk about the plan with you.

James Praise

P.S. I've created a portfolio focused on this role at jamespraise.xyz/work/shape.