Improbable – Product Marketing Manager, dreamDEX

I'm reaching out as someone who has spent the last several years finding the gap between a company's best story and the surface where a buyer reads it, then closing that gap.

My name is James. I'm a product marketing operator with 7+ years of hands-on experience across B2B and SaaS companies in Africa, North America, and Europe, often as the first or early marketing hire, building positioning and launch systems from scratch. Across that work, I've contributed to over $10M in qualified pipeline and supported more than 15 product launches.

I have marketed fintech products at Bujeti (YC W23) and Bento Africa. The motion this role needs is one I run in any category: finding where a real differentiation story hasn't reached the surface doing the actual selling, and fixing it. I noticed something specific researching dreamDEX. The blog post "dreamDEX is the endgame DEX" lays out a genuinely sharp story, permanent zero fees, native MCP server access for AI-driven traders, self-custody with CEX-grade execution. None of it appears on app.dreamdex.io, the actual product a Founding Trader lands on. No agent-access messaging, no competitor framing, no social proof. The differentiation claim exists. It hasn't reached the page where someone decides to connect a wallet.

It's the same motion I've applied elsewhere. At Reform, I repositioned a general-purpose form builder into a category-defining conversion product for a dual technical/business audience, 34% lift in trial activation. At FunnelEnvy, I built cross-brand attribution specifically because single-channel reporting kept overstating each channel's real contribution.

I put together a short brief on the app.dreamdex.io gap and where the Five Pillars story belongs.

Thank you for taking the time to read this.

James

P.S. I've created a portfolio focused on this role at jamespraise.xyz/work/dreamdex.