MaidThis Cleaning – Director of Marketing

One line in the JD stuck with me: the marketing system itself is a core part of what franchisees buy when they join MaidThis. That reframed the whole role for me. I would not just be marketing a cleaning brand, I would be running the actual product one layer up.

I'm James, a growth and marketing operator with 7+ years running marketing systems for US and international clients alike. Through my own company, MIA Acquisition, I run lead generation for US local-service businesses directly, home care, HVAC, pressure washing, water treatment, medspas: a qualification-form landing page, Meta ads targeted to each business's service area, and lead tracking, on a pay-per-qualified-lead model. Six niches are live on that system today, at zero upfront cost to the client. I also run my own paid ad account for that same business at a 4.84x return, real budget I set, shift, and defend myself. That's close to the exact mechanic this role owns across a franchisee network, just currently running one account at a time instead of many at once.

Beyond the US work, I've also run one marketing system across multiple markets internationally. At Cecure Intelligence Limited, I built and led revenue operations across five African countries simultaneously while launching a new business line across those same markets. At Komfot Health, I built country-specific GTM playbooks for three markets under one central strategy, each with its own compliance and execution path.

The hard part of this role is running one system, consistently, across many independent operators who aren't on my own payroll. I've built a version of that with MIA Business, a delivery system other specialists can run to my standard without me sitting in on every account.

Thank you for reading this.

James
