

Arcessio – Founding Growth Marketing Lead

I'm applying because Arcessio needs someone who has already built a marketing function from zero with AI as the operating system. That's how I run Marketing In Action: 72 Claude Code skills built and run daily, 31 published publicly on GitHub, the actual infrastructure a small team works from every day.

At MIA GTM, I built the go-to-market system itself: positioning, a self-built prospect data engine, and live outbound to B2B agencies, tech startups, app makers and Clay partners, each niche with its own language and offer. Arcessio is asking one person to pull engineers in through the product while giving enterprise and defense buyers a different kind of proof before they trust a young company with a sourcing decision. I've built that same split before, for a different product.

I don't have manufacturing or computer-aided design experience. What I do have is Hank Robotics, where I built positioning, an ideal customer profile, and a full search engine optimization architecture from scratch for a B2B AI-powered robotics company with no existing marketing function, and drove a 1,900% lift in qualified leads in three months.

I work from Lagos and hold a valid passport. I'll apply for a US business visa for the team meetings, customer visits and events this role expects, and my systems keep the work moving while I travel.
