Yellow Card – Growth Marketing Lead

The core of this job is work I've already done. I've worked a named list of enterprise accounts on a small team, as the person who builds the machinery so nobody repeats the same task by hand every week.

At FunnelEnvy I built the Target Account Strategy and account-based marketing (ABM) Playbook on Clay, ExactBuyer and Instantly, and enterprise meeting bookings rose 31%. I also ran cold outbound for five client accounts at once. Each month, per client, that reached 1,000 companies, held 10 meetings and created $151,962 in pipeline. Clay and n8n did the account research, enrichment and list building. Smartlead sent the mail. A person still reads and approves the messaging before it goes out, because that is where a sequence earns or loses a reply.

The system I fixed was measurement. On my own paid funnel, Meta was cross-crediting sales that belonged to other products. I reconciled what the ad platforms reported against actual checkout sales, and the same data showed that people were clicking buy and dropping at checkout, so the traffic and the creative were not the problem. Budget decisions now follow the backend sales. I do the same on Meta and TikTok for JegzFits Leatherworks, where return on ad spend has held near 6.5x across years on ₦2M a month.

The closest buyer I've sold to is the finance team at Bujeti, a fintech selling spend management to African companies, where I generated 1,331 marketing qualified leads in six months and grew business customers 500%.

I spent time on Yellow Card's pages before writing this. I wrote a teardown of how the dollar account is positioned to treasurers, what I would fix first, and what I would do in the first 90 days across paid, ABM and outbound. You can read it at jamespraise.xyz/work/yellow-card/proof/.

Some of this work has also been recognized publicly. I've been awarded one of 5 Growth Catalysts in Africa by ARMA (2026), named one of Africa's Top 20 Marketing Leaders (APMP 2025), featured in TechCabal, BusinessDay, and Condia as a leading marketing voice, and named by Cleva (YC W24) as a Top 10 Person to Follow in Marketing for 2026.

What do you think?
